Hon. JR Hoell, State Representative Paul Terry, and State Representative Shane Sirois Elected as Tri-Chairs of the NH House Freedom Caucus for the 2025-2026 Legislative Session

Concord, NH – [March 4th, 2025] – The New Hampshire House Freedom Caucus proudly announces the election of former NH Freedom Caucus Tri-chair Hon. JR Hoell, State Representative Paul Terry, and State Representative Shane Sirois as Tri-Chairs for the 2025-2026 legislative session. Their leadership will continue the caucus’s mission to uphold individual liberties, limited government, and constitutional principles in the Granite State.

Hon. JR Hoell, a longtime advocate for conservative values, brings extensive experience in legislative strategy and policy advocacy. Representative Paul Terry, known for his commitment to fiscal responsibility and government accountability, will be instrumental in advancing the caucus’s legislative priorities. Representative Shane Sirois, a passionate defender of personal freedoms and constitutional rights, will add a fresh perspective to the caucus’s leadership team.

“We are honored to lead the NH House Freedom Caucus during this critical time,” said the newly elected Tri-Chairs in a joint statement. “Our commitment to New Hampshire’s citizens remains unwavering as we work to promote policies that protect individual freedoms, encourage economic growth, and ensure government transparency.”

The NH House Freedom Caucus continues to be a driving force in the New Hampshire legislature, advocating for policies that align with the principles of liberty and limited government. Under the leadership of Hoell, Terry, and Sirois, the caucus is poised to further its impact on key legislative initiatives in the coming session.
